4. The distinction between Public and Private Law is a purely academic debate, nevertheless, it also affects legal practice.

There are areas of law, which may not fit into distinction of Public or Private Law. Study the following case:

An employment inspector investigates workplace safety, checking all the equipment. The inspector investigates workplace incidents, and conducts workplace inspections to evaluate compliance.

Decide whether it falls into the category of Public or Private law.

7. Mary had therapy sessions. She found out that the psychologist sent copies of her case notes to the insurance carrier responsible for reimbursement and that therapist should not have revealed this information. Client reported psychologist to the APA Ethics Committee for violating confidentiality principles. Psychologist explained to Ethics Committee that any client understands that their confidentiality may be breached when using an insurance company for third-party reimbursement due to administrative and professional peer review. Nonetheless, psychologist never informed client of this risk before

10. Analyze the following case:

Therapist sent a third billing notice to a slow-to-pay client’s fax machine in her office but client did not report to work that day. The bill was titled “psychological services rendered” and handwritten in large print was “Third Notice – OVERDUE!!” with client’s name. This notice sat in an open access mail tray of the busy office all day.

Was is reasonable? Is it allowed to send private material in such a manner?
